Spotify turns to audiobooks after podcast strategy fails

Spotify is increasing its investment into audiobooks* as the music streaming platform seeks out new growth areas to attract subscribers. This follows its unsuccessful $1bn expansion into podcasting.

Spotify will offer its premium subscribers in the UK and Australia up to 15 hours of audiobooks each month for no additional fee. Users will be able to access more than 150,000 titles, ranging from classics such as JRR Tolkien's Fellowship of the Ring to current bestsellers including Rebecca F Kuang's Yellowface.

5

Amazon's Audible is the market leader with two-thirds of the global audiobook market by revenue. Spotify's entry into the audiobook market could represent a challenge to the dominant position of Audible.

10

Global revenue from audiobooks is predicted to rise from $4bn in 2021 to more than $9bn by 2026.

Spotify increases its price for the first time in the UK

The streaming service will charge users £10.99 a month for its premium service. This is an increase of £1 since it was launched. The business said it would increase the price of a family subscription by £1 a month to £17.99. Similar price rises apply to the US, Canada and 49 other countries. The price increases are expected to raise an additional $1bn in the first year.

It comes as there is growing pressure from record labels and artists about how much is paid to the industry from streaming. There are growing concerns that music generated by artificial intelligence represents a threat to musicians.

Spotify, with more than 200 million paying subscribers, said the price rise was being made to meet 'market demands'. Spotify's rivals Apple Music, YouTube Music and Amazon Music Unlimited have all increased prices in the last year.

The price rises will be seen as a test of consumers' willingness to pay more for streaming and could be the start of further increases in the future.

Spotify said: "The market has continued to evolve since we launched. So that we can keep innovating, we are changing our prices across a number of markets around the world. These updates will help us continue to deliver value to customers and music artists on our platform."

Dyson alleges American rival copied its hair styler in £10m claim

The British business, founded by Sir James Dyson, has accused its American rival SharkNinja of infringing its patents with its £250 Shark FlexStyle hairdryer and styler.

Dyson has launched a UK High Court case against SharkNinja, accusing it of copying its hair styler, the Airwrap, in a claim valued at more than £10m. 5

In legal papers filed with the UK High Court, Dyson is seeking a judicial order to block sales of all air stylers and their attachments within the Shark FlexStyle range in the UK. It is demanding the destruction of all Shark FlexStyle inventory.

Dyson, which has moved its corporate headquarters to Singapore, told the UK court: "The estimated value of the claim exceeds £10 million." 10

The rivals are also battling in the US, Germany and France. Dyson told the US courts its development was "not easy, and it took many attempts to perfect the curling barrels featured on the Dyson Airwrap" as well as "years of research and development, engineering, design and substantial monetary and capital investment".

The two businesses have a history of legal disputes. In 2014, Dyson sued SharkNinja in a $200m (£163m) lawsuit over claims it had breached its patents for hand-held vacuum cleaners. Four years later, the claim was voluntarily dismissed and a judge said the two designs were clearly different. 15

In a separate case, Dyson won $16m in damages against SharkNinja from a Chicago court over false advertising claims after the US business claimed its vacuums were superior to those of the British business. 20

The Shark brand was launched in 2007 and since then its parent company has grown to make sales of £3bn in 2022. Dyson, founded in 1991, reported sales of £6.5bn in 2022.

Extract GEmployee bonuses at risk

The John Lewis Partnership (JLP) is the largest employee-owned business in the UK. It owns 34 department stores and the Waitrose supermarket chain. In September 2023, Dame Sharon White, CEO of JLP, cast doubt over whether JLP employees, known as partners, would be paid a bonus this year. This came after the retailer admitted its return to making a profit would take longer than planned. 5

JLP said it would prioritise investments in its business rather than paying bonuses to its partners this year. Other rewards to its partners, including discounts, competitive pay rates, pension contributions, subsidised meals, flexible working and holiday pay would continue unchanged. 10

Dame Sharon White insisted that a decision had yet to be made about paying bonuses but said other things are more important. Dame Sharon said: "Our partners are the centre of the partnership and can hopefully see that right decisions are being made. If the roof of your house needs mending, everyone there would work together to get it fixed."

It raises the warning that partners, who are co-owners of the business, could miss out on an annual bonus for the third time in four years. Last year marked only the second time since 1953 that JLP did not pay out a bonus to partners. The first time was in 2020. 15

It came after JLP revealed another six months of losses and announced a delay to its plans, saying it no longer expected to return to sustainable profit by 2026.
